CALL FOR NOMINATIONS

The International Conference on Information Systems invites nominations for its 2009 Doctoral Consortium.

The Doctoral Consortium provides doctoral students working on their dissertation research an opportunity to share and develop their research ideas, explore issues related to academic and research careers in the information systems field, and build relationships with other IS PhD students from around the world.

The Consortium will be held on Friday, December 11 to Monday, December 14, 2009 at The University of Arizona's Biosphere 2 facility.

Submission deadline: midnight US EDT, May 25, 2009.

Eligibility: Participation to the Consortium is by invitation only. Each university may submit only one nominee. Ph.D. students currently working on information systems dissertations are eligible for nomination submission. Candidates should successfully defend their dissertation/thesis proposals before December 2009, although they need not have defended their proposals before the submission deadline. Students who will have completed their dissertations by December 2009 will not be accepted. Nominated candidates should intend to pursue an academic career in information systems following the completion of their Ph.D. studies.

Please visit the ICIS 2009 Doctoral Consortium website for more details and information on the nominee submission requirements.
